A WORD OF DEFENSE

Biotas in some areas have fallen into disrepute, because of the views of some landscape people. However, like the faithful old dog, when the chips were down last Winter, the true worth of this family was demonstrated. While below zero temperatures were ruining peoples Boxwoods, Hollies, and other evergreens, good old Biotas merely shivered, and when the spring finally came, there they were, undamaged, and undaunted. CONIFEROUS EVERGREENS

We have discontinued our old practice of field growing Juniper liners from hardwood cuttings. All materials now are produced in polyquon enclosures, and taken through pots. This has greatly relieved the strain of timing in the Spring. We have used a high peat potting mix, liberal fertilizer, and are producing beautiful first class liners.
